History & Background

When Tiger Electronics launched the Furby at the end of 1998, it became the toy phenomenon of its era: a fuzzy electronic creature that blinked, wiggled, and spoke its own language, "Furbish," gradually learning English the longer it was loved. More than 40 million were sold in the first waves, and holiday shortages sent parents to line up outside toy stores. Alongside the everyday Furby, Tiger released a stream of special and limited editions — holiday themes, store exclusives, a New Year's celebration, and licensed overseas versions — and it is these editions that today's collectors pursue.

The collection appraised here holds twenty-one Furbys, every one of them still mint in its original sealed box. Sealed examples are the collector standard, since the box preserves the edition's identity and the toy remains exactly as it left the factory. Values below reflect the current market for sealed examples of each edition; every figure moves with box condition, so crisp corners and clean cellophane matter. The collection joined the Mom's Joy Room inventory in October 2026.

Special & Limited Editions

1. Angel Furby

1999 special edition sold through KB Toys; warm white body with white wings and gold halo and harp accents. One of the most sought-after special editions — sealed examples have sold as high as $800. The standout of this collection.

ESTIMATED WORTH

$300-$700

2. Your Royal Majesty Furby

2000 special limited edition; a regal colorway released late in the original run. Scarce sealed, and among the stronger sellers of the later specials.

ESTIMATED WORTH

$150–$400

3. Jester Furby

Special edition in harlequin colors, one of the collector favorites of the original specials. Sealed examples are seen infrequently and command a premium.

ESTIMATED WORTH

$100–$300

4. Reindeer Furby

Holiday special edition released December 1999 as a KB Toys / Toy Works exclusive, with a little antlered face and festive coloring. Sealed examples are scarce and warmly collected each December.

ESTIMATED WORTH

$100–$225

5. Valentine Furby

Valentine's Day special edition, released for the holiday in the original run; heart-and-pink theme. A perennial gift-market favorite that sells briskly each February.

ESTIMATED WORTH

$75–$200

6. Wizard Furby

A scarce edition seen for sale only rarely; the thin supply keeps collector interest ahead of the ordinary colorways.

ESTIMATED WORTH

$100–$200

7. Tomy Japanese Furby (White)

Japanese-market release distributed by Tomy, Tiger's partner in Japan, with Japanese box text. Foreign-market Furbys were never sold in American stores, and collectors seek them out.

ESTIMATED WORTH

$100–$200

8. Snowball Furby

All-white first-generation 1998 edition, one of the earliest Furby

ESTIMATED WORTH

$75–$150

colorways. A sweet, display-perfect piece.

9. Graduation Furby

1999 special limited edition in a black-and-white cap-and-gown colorway. A popular gift edition that collectors still hunt sealed.

ESTIMATED WORTH

$60–$125

10. Millennium "Year 2000" Furby

Y2K special edition celebrating the new millennium, in celebratory blue and silver. Made in large numbers, so sealed examples stay affordable.

ESTIMATED WORTH

$50–$125

11. Statue of Liberty Furby

Patriotic special edition (model 70-893), a KB Toys exclusive from May 1999 with a torch-and-crown theme, limited to 72,000 pieces.

ESTIMATED WORTH

$50–$100

12. President Furby

Special limited edition; one of the more commonly encountered of the labeled specials, so sealed examples trade more modestly than the name suggests.

ESTIMATED WORTH

$25–$60

Original Colorway Editions

13. Tropical Furby

Bright tropical colorway from the original series; a cheerful shelf piece that photographs well.

ESTIMATED WORTH

$100–$200

14. Juicy Grape Furby

Grape-purple special colorway of the original series.

ESTIMATED WORTH

$75–$150

15. Banana Furby

ESTIMATED WORTH

Yellow colorway of the original series.

$75–$150

16. All Pink Furby

All-pink colorway of the original series; a favorite for its sweetness and display appeal.

ESTIMATED WORTH

$75–$150

17. Tie-Dye Furby

Swirled tie-dye colorway of the original series.

ESTIMATED WORTH

$75–$150

18. Grey & Black Furby

Grey-and-black colorway of the original series; a handsome, wolfish look.

ESTIMATED WORTH

$75–$150

19. Elephant Blue Furby

Elephant colorway of the original series, in blue-grey with big friendly ears.

ESTIMATED WORTH

$75–$150

20. Black & White Furby

Black-and-white colorway of the original series; the tuxedo of the Furby family.

ESTIMATED WORTH

$75–$150

21. Ladybug Furby

Red-and-black-spotted colorway of the original series; among the most charming of the everyday editions.

ESTIMATED WORTH

$75–$150

Furby Friends

22. Interactive Shelby

The Furby Friend spin-off released in 2001 by Tiger Electronics and Hasbro — a clamshell little creature with antennae, big expressive eyes, and a personality all her own. Sealed Shelbys are scarcer than sealed Furbys and are warmly collected as the sequel era of the Furby story.

ESTIMATED WORTH

$150–$300

COMBINED ESTIMATED WORTH — COLLECTION OF TWENTY-TWO

$2,035 – $4,485

The Angel, Royal Majesty, and Jester carry the collection, with Shelby alongside them; the top of the range depends chiefly on their box condition and the strength of the collector market at time of sale.

Collector's Notes

Furby collecting rewards sealed boxes above all: an opened Furby, however clean, typically brings a third or less of its sealed counterpart. Values also follow box condition closely, so these are best stored flat, out of sunlight, away from heat, and never stacked under weight. The Angel, Jester, Royal Majesty, and Reindeer are the pieces a serious Furby collector will travel for. Because Furby prices move with nostalgia waves and holiday demand, the strongest selling windows are late October through mid-February.

"Twenty-some years in their boxes, still waiting to wake up and learn their first word."
