HISTORY & NOTABLE DETAILS

HISTORY & IDENTIFICATION NOTES

This Animated Holiday Symphonium was produced by Mr. Christmas, a well-known American holiday collectibles company, during the brand's popular run of animated music boxes in the 1990s and early 2000s. The design recreates a 19th-century-style ballroom scene, with dancing figures that rotate and light up as the unit plays, set within a glass-topped display cabinet finished to resemble fine wood.

The Symphonium line was designed around an interchangeable disc system, allowing owners to swap in different music selections much like a mechanical disc player. While most surviving units are found with somewhere between ten and twenty-five discs, this example includes more than thirty — a notably large and complete set spanning both Christmas standards and classic songs, making it a stronger and more collectible lot than most comparable units on the market.

The unit has been tested and confirmed to be in good working order, with the music mechanism, rotating scene, and interior lighting all functioning as intended — a meaningful point in its favor, as motor and lighting failure are the most common condition issues found in these pieces today.

CONDITION & NOTABLE FEATURES

- Fully functional rotating ballroom scene with animated dancing figures.
- Interior lighting operates correctly, illuminating the ballroom display.
- Includes original AC power adapter/cord.
- Includes 30+ interchangeable music discs — well above the typical count found with surviving units.
- Glass-topped display cabinet in sound cosmetic condition consistent with age and use.
