1980*

HISTORY

Austin Productions, Inc. was a prolific American manufacturer of cast sculptures from the mid-20th century onward, known for translating fine-art-style figural and animal designs into affordable cold-cast composite pieces for the home decor market. Their catalog spanned everything from wildlife and equestrian scenes to Art Deco-inspired figures, often signed and dated on the base. This 9" piece, depicting a young girl feeding a horse, reflects the gentle, pastoral figural style that made Austin's work a staple of tabletop sculpture collections through the 1970s and 80s.

NOTABLE INFORMATION

- ◆ Maker: Austin Productions, Inc., dated 1980
- ◆ Approx. 9" tall cold-cast composite sculpture
- ◆ Subject: young girl feeding a horse
- ◆ Signed/dated to base, consistent with catalog production
- ◆ Condition: good, no visible chips or losses

COLLECTOR NOTES

Austin Productions pieces are affordable, well-made decorative sculptures that hold consistent (if modest) demand among equestrian and figural decor collectors. Well-preserved, signed examples like this one are the most desirable within the range.
