Convertible High Chair & Stroller

Antique Wood Combination Piece — Working Condition

HISTORY

Combination high chair/stroller pieces were a clever, space-saving furniture design popular in the Victorian and early 20th-century era, when nurseries and households valued multi-purpose furnishings. These convertible pieces typically fold or hinge to transform from a stationary tall high chair into a rolling stroller on cast iron or wooden wheels, allowing a single piece of furniture to serve double duty as a baby grew. Surviving examples that still convert and roll smoothly, as this one does, represent genuine functional survivors of period nursery furniture design.

NOTABLE INFORMATION

- ◆ Type: Convertible high chair / stroller combination
- ◆ Material: wood construction with rolling wheel mechanism
- ◆ Functionally converts between high chair and stroller configurations
- ◆ Condition: works great — mechanism and wheels fully functional

COLLECTOR NOTES

Convertible high chair/stroller pieces are a favorite among antique nursery furniture and folk-Americana collectors, and value climbs meaningfully for examples where the conversion mechanism and wheels still function smoothly, as noted here. Original finish, cane seating (if present), and completeness of hardware are the other key factors collectors look for.
